It was already quite late when they set out for the next city, which was about fifteen kilometres away on the other side of the hills. They felt sure that they would find food and a hotel for the night there. It became dark soon after they left the town, but luckily, they did not meet anyone as they drove fast along the wide road that led to the hills. As they drove, it became cold & began to rain, making it difficult to see the road ahead. They slowed down but continued on their journey.

After they had travelled for about fifteen kilometres, they still had not seen the city which was on the map. They were beginning to get worried. Then, suddenly, without any warning, the car stopped. They found out that the car had run out of petrol. Although they had a little food, only some bread & biscuits, they decided to sleep in the car that night and locate the city the next day.
