8) John Keats, known as a Romantic poet, loved writing about nature, love, beauty, and imagination. His famous poems include "Endymion" and "Ode to a Nightingale." Even though people criticized him and he faced health problems and personal sorrows, his words still bring joy. One of his sayings is, "A thing of beauty is a joy forever." It means beautiful things make us happy always. Keats' poetry teaches us to find happiness in the lasting beauty around us, no matter what challenges we face.

Q.VI

9) In a town, two women argued over a child, each saying it was hers. The wise judge suggested cutting the child in half to solve the dispute. One woman quickly said, "Don't hurt the child!" showing she was the real mother. The other stayed silent. The judge, seeing the love in the speaking woman's eyes, ruled in her favor, reuniting her with the child and highlighting a mother's care.
