6. Robert Bruce – King – lying on the ground in a dejected mood – failed to defeat his enemies – was thinking of giving up the attempt – saw a spider falling down from the ceiling – the ceiling far away – wondered how it would get there – the spider fell back again – again it tried – again it fell – it made nine such attempts – no success – climbed up once more – at last succeeded in reaching the roof – Bruce imitated its example – he too tried once again – was successful.

Answer:

Robert Bruce, the King of Scotland, was feeling very sad because he couldn't defeat his enemies. One day, as he sat alone, he saw a little spider trying to climb up to the ceiling. The spider fell down nine times, but it didn't give up. On its tenth try, it finally reached the ceiling. Watching the spider, the king felt inspired. He decided to try again to defeat his enemies. With determination, he succeeded in his next attempt and became victorious.
